It is called the Cranial Audio Transmission System or CAT. I call it comfortable, and for a guy whose ears have been bombarded from everything from small arms to explosives and deep sea diving that says a lot. I appreciate the comfort. The lack of sweating sweat, the boom mike, and the vice grips of the over the top head piece I can now do without. All of this coupled with the excellent reception and transmission. Thank you for a great product that I would recommend to anyone!
